

Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra, Time for Three Celebrate Completion of Residency with Happy Hour at the Symphony Performance

Time for Three and Special Guests to Perform on April 10, 2019

(December 19, 2018) – Join the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra in a celebration of the completion of the 10-season tenure of artists-in-residence, Time for Three. In 2009, the genre-defying group became the first resident ensemble of a major symphony orchestra. Now, we invite you to help the ISO thank Time for Three for their groundbreaking contributions to our city as they take the stage for the final performance of their residency.

With a fresh artistic perspective and no musical boundaries, the group has transformed the Stella Artois Happy Hour at the Symphony series into one of the most compelling and popular concert experiences at the ISO. The trio has played a significant role in expanding the ISO's audience base, and has been featured artists on every major ISO concert series.

“Time for Three has shown Indianapolis audiences the remarkable outcomes of innovative thinking and creative programming,” said CEO James Johnson. “Their work in creating and cultivating the Happy Hour series has connected the ISO with many new patrons, listeners who turn to the ISO to expand their musical horizons and have a wonderful time along the way. We are deeply grateful to Time for Three for this decade-long collaboration.”

On Wednesday, April 10, 2019, the ISO – along with several special guests – will celebrate the music and legacy of Time for Three during Happy Hour at the Symphony. The festivities begin at 5 p.m. for our extended pre-concert lobby experience featuring food and drink samples from local restaurants. At 6:30, Time for Three and the musicians of the ISO will kick off a concert experience highlighting the innovation, inspiration, and fun the guys have brought to our audiences over the years. Join us as we thank Time for Three for blazing a trail in the orchestral world – and bringing our audiences along for the ride!
